Significant improvement in earlier FBC sampling

Clozapine blood monitoring

Drs Sam Bresland and Anna Kamusella, trainee doctors in psychiatry explained how the introduction of a ward-based phlebotomist has improved clozapine blood monitoring in two Adult Acute Admission wards within the Royal Edinburgh Hospital (REH). The data demonstrated that earlier and consistent clozapine blood testing reduces waste and is improving safe clozapine management for patients in the two North Edinburgh wards.

Gathering baseline data on 2222 calls at the Royal Edinburgh Hospital

Dr Naheed Raza, core trainee in psychiatry shared her audit of 2222 emergency calls made on the Royal Edinburgh Hospital site. Providing insights into the most common 2222 emergency calls and where they occur on site, it is anticipated that the findings from the audit will inform a more tailored approach to simulation training for trainee doctors to respond to 2222 emergency calls. Feedback from attendees will be reviewed to explore opportunities for improvement, and how trainee doctors can be supported to change how they prepare for being on call.
